Household Income and Expenditure Survey 1977
This survey is used by van Ginneken and Park (1984). It was the first nation wide survey in Fiji with a sample covering 2554 households. Data collection was spread over a 12 months period. Income data were collected using appropriate recall periods for seasonal and irregular sources of income. Self-employment income appears to be seriously underreported. The income concept is gross income including imputed rent and subsistence consumption and subsistence gifts received. Deciles were apparently available to the authors.
